In an address to the National Prayer Breakfast, Bono shared his passion on ending extreme poverty. “There’s a gigantic chasm between the scale of the emergency and the scale of the response... It’s not about charity, it’s about justice,” stated Bono.

With over 1-million children trafficked each year, JFCI is working hard to see a large-scale response. In 2006 we focused on fueling an abolitionist movement to bring an end to child sex slavery and exploitation. We’re excited to see a growing army of abolitionists who are saying “Enough! This has to end, and I want to be a part of making it happen.”! We’ve seen increasing numbers of people from all walks of life, from children to senior citizens rising to the challenge, giving their time, talents and finances to put an end to this modern day slavery. To say that this is encouraging would be an understatement.

Over the last year I spent time in Thailand and Cambodia where I witnessed the impact JFCI is having on the lives of children. I was humbled to spend time with caregivers who attended JFCI’s first Certificate Training Program in Aftercare. These are the true heroes of our story. They work with some of the most extreme cases – caring for, loving and helping to restore the lives of sexually exploited children. During the training sessions they shared their stories of children now in their care. Many stories are simply too disturbing to communicate but I was deeply moved by the selflessness and deep commitment of these caregivers in response to such extreme circumstances.

These caregivers are ordinary people, with incredible hearts. Many had no prior training in the aftercare of trafficked and sexually exploited children. Our Director of Aftercare, Dr. Gundelina Velazco, provided practical tools, techniques and an open forum for the attendees who rarely receive support for their vital work.

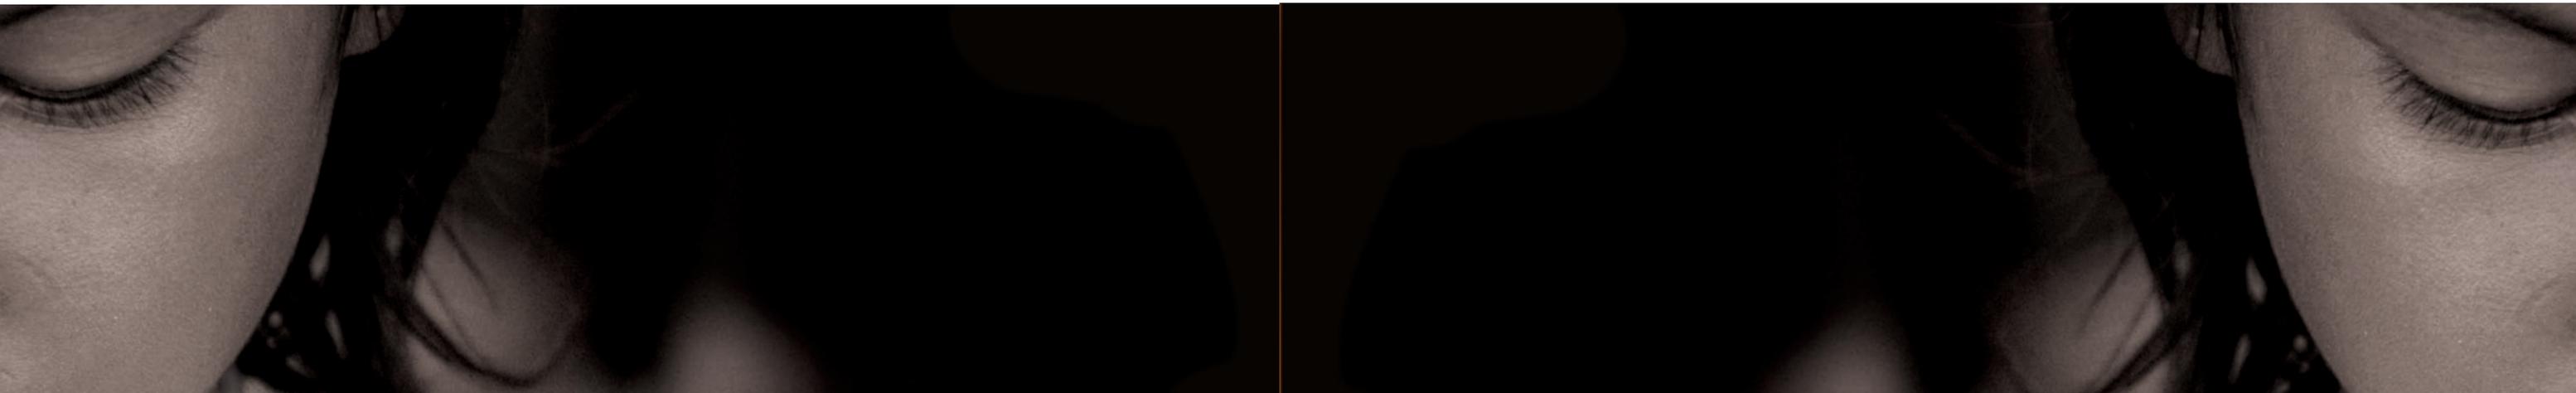

One caregiver recently wrote, “As (this program) was specific to problems in abused kids, it gave a feeling that you are not alone trying to do this, but there are many more people who have the heart and understanding”.

Equipping and empowering grassroots caregivers who are already on the ground is proving to be not only a great use of resources, but also extremely effective.

We’re grateful for your partnership with us this year. Your support is helping train caregivers who directly impact the lives of so many children. Thank you for adding your voice, time, talent and finances to a growing movement that will not rest until all children are safe and free to live as children. ”

Two More Wells Built

As part of the JFCI prevention program, two more wells in high trafficking areas of Cambodia have been fully funded. Children now stay in their village to collect water rather than walking miles, risking abduction by sex traffickers.

SE Asian Coalition

This is a coalition of organizations in Cambodia who are working with victims or with those at risk of being abused or exploited. They facilitate a network of more than twenty organizations who are committed to ending sexual abuse and trafficking. JFCI funds the key coalition activities and administration.

In September 2006, JFCI management met with the SE Asian Coalition along with 55 professionals from 25 organizations, in order to introduce new research and resources. There was discussion of new issues, annual programs, and prevention ideas. This program is one of our most cost effective solutions and a strong partnership for long-term prevention.

JFCI Expands Advocacy Programs

Along with the Faith Community Network and Campus Coalition Programs, JFCI Launched the Abolitionist Program.

Abolitionist Program: Abolitionist n. A reformer who advances the abolition of slavery. JFCI's abolitionist program consists of individuals who have signed a vow to "work toward the abolition of child sex trafficking and exploitation – they become a voice for children unable to speak for themselves." Our Abolitionist program is directed at individuals between the ages of 14-34, with a twofold goal of raising awareness and raising funds. We received 1500 new sign-ups within the first few months after launching the program.

There are currently 12 official Faith Community Network churches committed to JFCI.

There are currently over 40 campuses involved in the Campus Coalition.

JFCI Training Programs

JFCI has devised training programs to be used to train participants at several levels. The program aims at developing knowledge and skills for working with victims of Child Sex Trafficking Exploitation (CSTE). Through these training programs, caregivers learn to help CSTE survivors by facilitating restorative experiences, teaching life skills, and providing hope for a better future.

The JFCI Training Program in Aftercare is conducted at two levels:

Certificate TPA: a two-week intensive training for grassroots caregivers already involved with rescued children in safehomes.

Diploma TPA: a nine-month university level course for those committed to a career in CSTE aftercare.

The Training Program in Aftercare is designed to:

- Expose aftercare workers to various theories, techniques and applications of relevant disciplines, with emphasis on victims of CSTE.
- Provide an intensive and highly supervised practical experience with victims of CSTE and other workers in the field.
- Develop competence and skills to conduct scientific research that contributes to the knowledge base of aftercare and prevention in CSTE.

The first JFCI Certificate Training Program in Aftercare began in 2006 and trained 15 grassroots caregivers.

"All the information which I have learned in this seminar can adapt and use in the boys' (safe)home such as the techniques on communication can increase the trust of the children and better understanding between them and the house staffs." -CTPA Trainee

"I learned how to communicate with children through activities such as plays, arts, story telling, as well as many others." -CTPA Trainee

The first JFCI Diploma Training Program in Aftercare also began in late 2006, and is currently training 8 new career caregivers.

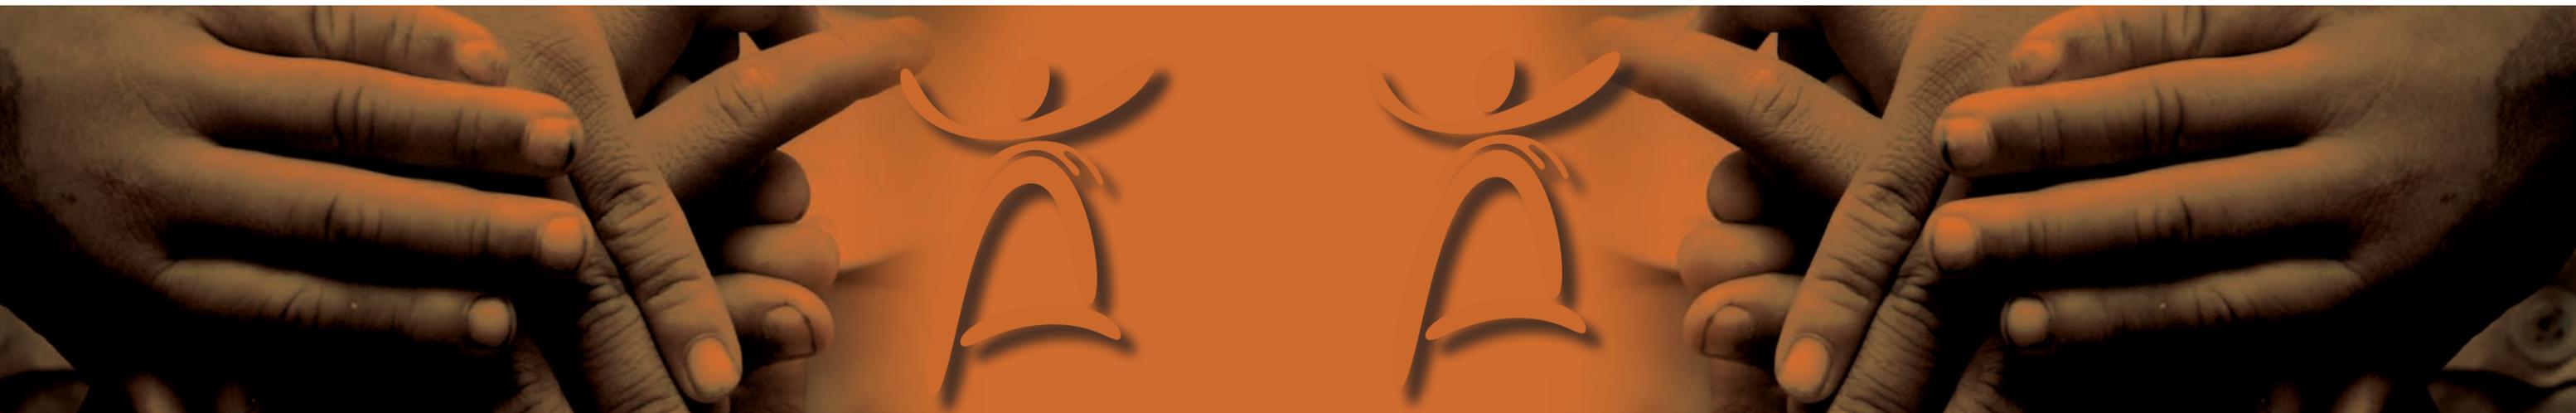

"Floating" Therapy Room

The Floating Therapy Room at a safehome in Cambodia has begun construction this year. JFCI has funded the first part of the construction, and has fully funding two counselor's salaries for the next year.

Transitional Homes

Three transitional homes for sexually trafficked and exploited girls in Thailand have been fully funded by JFCI in 2006. These homes are vital to sustaining the health and providing a real future for girls who have been trafficked or exploited.

In September 2002, JFCI Co-Founders went on an exploratory trip to SE Asia to determine how they could serve in the fight against child sex trafficking. In brothels, they saw young children being sold for sex, but in safehomes they witnessed the miracle of restoration as they sang and danced with sex trafficking survivors. The goal of this and subsequent trips was not to “reinvent the wheel” but to find out where the greatest needs were and how they could be most helpful in filling those needs. After 18 months of research, networking and other foundational work, JFCI became an official Public Charity in March of 2004.

Co-Founders

Robert Morris is co-founder and president of JFCI. Prior to establishing JFCI, Rob worked with Mercy Ships International directing training schools at the International Operations Center. Rob travels internationally to speak and teach on issues of justice, compassion and human rights.

Desirea Rodgers is a co-founder and Creative Director for JFCI. Previous to Justice for Children International, Desirea spent ten years working within the U.S. and abroad in leadership training and community based outreach programs for Youth With A Mission. She is currently developing “The Story Project” which will incorporate photography and the stories of children who have been rescued out of the sex trade.

Lamont Hiebert is a co-founder of JFCI. Prior to launching JFCI, Lamont established himself as a successful recording artist and songwriter, receiving a 2002 Dove Award nomination and number one hit radio status for his song “Ocean” (www.tenshelkeshirt.com). As a musician/abolitionist, Lamont helps inspire a movement against modern-day slavery and care for victims of child sex trafficking.

Board of Directors

The JFCI board of Directors includes co-founders Rob Morris and Desirea Rodgers and the following:

Stephan Bauman is the country director for World Relief Rwanda based in Kigali, Rwanda. Prior to joining World Relief Rwanda, Stephan served as director of international programs for World Hope International. From 1994 to 2001, Stephan worked for Mercy Ships International as director of programs and director of training. Stephan is a certified public accountant. He holds degrees in international public policy, intercultural studies and business.

Heather Crane received her degree in accounting from the University of Oregon. She worked as an auditor for Deloitte & Touche for two years. She currently travels with her husband, who plays professional golf on the PGA tour. She also serves on the board of the Tour Wives’ Association, whose focus is to raise money to support various children’s charities throughout the country.

Mark Markiewicz is the Executive Director for Justice for Children International in the UK. Prior to this Mark was the Executive Director for the Business Professional Network (BPN) in the USA and was the National Director for Youth With A Mission in England (YWAM). He has eighteen years of experience in global missions and development leadership and worked with JFCI in the USA prior to moving to the UK.

Glenn Miles is a children’s nurse, who began his career with hands-on experience with children and their families in stressful life experiences. He has done significant work in refugee camps in Thailand and Cambodia, but has also worked in India, Pakistan, the Philippines, Nepal and Sri Lanka. Glenn recently spent five years with Tearfund in Cambodia working on advocacy, research, facilitation, capacity building and training.

Bette Ann White is a seasoned financial consultant and the principal of Integrity Financial Consulting. She holds a BS in Accounting from Drexel University in Philadelphia and a Masters in Public Health in Hospital Administration from Yale University. Bette Ann directed her attention to health care finance, gaining experience in consulting/audit services and operations. Most recently, Bette Ann served as Chief Financial Officer of a Physician Practice Management/Managed Care company. In addition to a BS and MPH, she is a CPA and Accredited Valuation Analyst.

Kristin Wiebe currently directs anti-trafficking programs in West Africa for the Faith-based Agencies’ Initiative Against Trafficking In Persons Consortium, and in Cambodia for World Hope International. She holds a law degree from the University of San Francisco School of Law and has worked on trafficking issues in the United States, Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Liberia, Sierra Leone and Cambodia. She has also lobbied at the United Nations Commission on Human Rights to address the demand for trafficking.

Financial Giving

Individuals can make one-off or monthly contributions to JFCI via the JFCI website using a credit card or they can mail a check to the JFCI U.S. office.

Planned Giving

There are many creative ways you can give a planned gift such as charitable gift annuities and charitable remainder trusts, as well as the transfer of appreciated real estate or securities, real estate properties, or life insurance policies. JFCI can provide you with additional information and assistance in taking advantage of any of these giving methods.

Gifts by Bequest

A bequest allows you to make a contribution to JFCI while reducing estate taxes.

When making your will, simply state the following:

I give, devise, and bequeath to Justice for Children International at 817 Chapel Street, Suite 3E, New Haven, CT 06510, the sum of $ _____ (or _____ % of my residual estate otherwise describe the gift) for the general purposes and uses of Justice for Children International at the discretion of the Board of Directors.

Foundation and Corporate Giving

JFCI is supported by individual and family foundations that have a desire to see the abolition of child sex trafficking and exploitation. Proposals are available for all JFCI projects and can be sent for your review and consideration. Donations can be designated for use in specific programs. Many companies also have foundation funds available for philanthropic efforts around the globe.

JFCI uses donations and grants for their intended purposes. When projects are fully funded, additional donations for those projects will be used where most needed.
