In October 2007, through the help, guidance, and generosity of “Brains on Fire”, an identity company, JFCI transitioned to a new name: "Love146."

Over the last year we’ve re-examined why we exist as an organization and the name change has been a big part of this process. Why did we choose Love146? In 2002, the co-founders of Love146 travelled to South East Asia on an exploratory trip to determine how they could serve in the fight against child sex trafficking. While there, two of the founders were taken undercover with investigators to a brothel, where they witnessed children being sold for sex. Each girl in the brothel had a number pinned to her red dress. Each girl had a vacant stare. Each girl’s eyes seemed lifeless. But there was one girl that still had a fight left in her eyes...number 146. Her number has come to represent the multitudes effected by sex-trafficking and exploitation. As an organization, we may never know her name, but we will never forget her number... #145.

JUSTICE AT ITS BEST IS LOVE CORRECTING EVERYTHING THAT STANDS AGAINST LOVE

(LOVE PROTECTS) (LOVE DEFENDS)
(LOVE RESTORES) (LOVE EMPowers)

This is a tremendously exciting opportunity for us! Over the last 5 years we’ve grown rapidly and we continue to grow. The ugly reason behind this growth is that child sex slavery and exploitation has also grown in impact. Our programs that began under the name of JFCI are continuing and expanding. We’re not changing who we are, rather more accurately communicating who we are. As our work expands, it’s important for us to remember why we started and why we continue. Thank you for partnering with us.

LOVE146 VISION

THE ABOLITION OF CHILD SEX SLAVERY AND EXPLOITATION. -NOTHING LESS.

LOVE146 MISSION

ABOLITION & RESTORATION!
WE COMBAT CHILD SEX SLAVERY & EXPLOITATION WITH THE UNEXPECTED AND RESTORE SURVIVORS WITH EXCELLENCE.

THE DAY AFTER SHE ARRIVED AT OUR SAFEHOME, ONE OF OUR CAREGIVERS ASKED HER “WHAT IS YOUR WISH IN LIFE?” SHE ANSWERED, “MY WISH HAS COME TRUE. I AM HOME.”
If your hearts ache and bleed, we want you, you will help us; but if you merely adopt our principles as dry theories, do let us alone: we have millstones enough swinging at our necks already. Further, if you join us merely out of a sense of duty, we pray you keep aloof and give place to those who leap into our ranks because they cannot keep themselves out; who instead of whining about duty, shout ‘privilege,’ delight!"

These words were spoken by Theodore Dwight Weld, a Connecticut abolitionist over 175 years ago. They inspired a generation to the fight against slavery.

Love146 has been infused with hope this year as we have seen many, like yourselves, joining the current fight against the form of modern day slavery called child sex trafficking and exploitation. What encourages us most is not only the zeal of new abolitionists, but the strategic thinking, skills and resources you are bringing to the table. And to top it off, the driving force behind this movement is the tenacious belief that one day this slavery will end.

This is what has enabled us to accomplish all that we have this past year. As you can see in this report it has been an amazing year of growth and effective action on behalf of the most innocent and vulnerable. I hope that as you read through the report it begins to strengthen that same tenacious belief in you. After all...this is not about “dry theories” or “duty”, but about justice. It’s about love. Martin Luther King Jr. said that “Justice at its best is love correcting everything that stands against love.”

Thank you for loving! Thank you for “leaping into our ranks.” We are in this together. What a privilege! What a delight.

Abolition and Restoration!

Pink Home*

In 2007, Love146 started a new safehome project in the Philippines, led by our Director of Aftercare, Dr. Gundelina Velazco. The Pink Home provides children (girls) in the safehome with holistic rehabilitation in a family-like atmosphere. The girls are provided with physical, mental, spiritual and psychological therapy. Love146 provides operating costs for staff, food, shelter, therapy and education for the girls. The Love146 model of aftercare ensures health and safety, effective healing and restoration, promotes growth and development and enables the children to become productive members of society.

Dr. Gundelina Velazco describes that “on many corners in Manila, you will see 8 to 12-year old girls begging by day. At night they wear make-up and short dresses...they are usually handled by pimps. This is the face of child prostitution in Manila.” Starting with the Pink Home, we will be building additional facilities to provide the essential nurturing rehabilitation that these children need. Towards this goal, we have successfully identified the land to build a new Rounded Safehome, and construction will begin late 2008.

Thailand Safehome

Love 146 has funded the operating cost of a partner safehome in Thailand. This safehome provides healing and hope in a caring, loving environment for thirty girls ages 6-18 years old who have been trafficked or sexually abused. This safehome is an environment where children receive physical and emotional healing necessary for recovery and continuation onto university education or profession. One resident 15-year-old girl said, “Before I came here, I was just a dog, but now I am somebody.” Restoration is possible, and the results are inspiring.

Transitional Safehome

In 2007, Love 146 raised the necessary funding to completely sponsor the construction of a transitional home in Thailand. This was made possible largely due to the tremendous efforts of our supporters whose votes earned our organization the MySpace Impact Award for Social Justice. The facility will be used to prepare girls for independent adult living after departure from the safehome. This is a community-based residence where girls are trained to develop life-skills that will gradually adapt them to the complexities of independent living.
Certificate In Training Program (CTPA)

The CTPA reaches out to children hurt by sexual abuse and exploitation by training their caregivers. This one-week training equips participants with foundational knowledge, skills, and attitudes that are necessary to work with survivors of sexual exploitation. Two CTPAs were conducted in Manila this year. The two trainings had a total of 33 participants coming from partner organizations. All of the participants wrote on the last day of the training that they gained priceless and practical knowledge from the training, especially play therapy, assessment, arts techniques, and games, which will help them in their work with the children.

After the trainings, some of the participants were invited to come together again for a follow-up evaluation. This evaluation activity highlighted the improved work of the participants with the children. For example, one participant said that she was promoted soon after the CTPA. This is because her work improved as a result of knowledge gained in the CTPA, and even her co-workers observed it. All of the participants specified and enacted how at least one aspect of the CTPA has helped them in their work with the children. The CTPA evaluation activity also served as a venue for partnership and networking as the participants discussed how to help one another.

Advocacy for the Vulnerable

In 2007, Love 146 achieved tremendous progress providing holistic services, including education, shelter and social care to high-risk children and their families within the Vietnamese Communities living in Cambodia. The project started with about 30 children, and quickly doubled in size to about 60, with kids ranging in ages between 3 and 14 years old. All of these children have at least one sibling who works in brothels, and are considered the most vulnerable for trafficking. As such, it is essential to ensure that parental involvement and support for the children in this program by hosting quarterly meetings with the parents. The education has been a struggle at times, but we remain very encouraged by the parents’ efforts to cooperate in support of their children.
Coalition of Organizations in SE Asia

For a few years, Love146 has been a major part of a coalition of organizations in Cambodia who are working with children who have been or are at risk of being sexually abused or exploited. The Coalition facilitates a network of more than forty organizations who are committed to ending sexual abuse and trafficking. Love146 funds the key coalition activities and administration.

Over the past year, this coalition made huge steps in the fight against trafficking by establishing a partnership with the Asia Foundation to standardize the forms for data collection relating to shelters and trafficking. The Coalition also conducted a child protection card development meeting where a selection of current child help cards, child rights cards and child protection cards were presented. The cards focused on a key message “I can say no to... Being sold, unsafe touch, violence at home, and violence at school...” with telephone numbers of HR orgs and police to call. The Coalition facilitated a Shelter Forum meeting that included participation from 30 partner organizations. The Coalition, which collectively administers to nearly 300 women and children, studied the collection and analysis of critical data, the key issues facing both survivors and organizations in addressing emerging trends and training needs for caregivers. In 2007, the coalition assisted in cases of rape, and cases of sexual abuse/trafficking in the community, and are continually monitoring the progress.

Stop Child Abuse Project

The Stop Child Abuse Project educates Cambodian school teachers and children in public schools about trafficking and violence. The project teaches practical strategies to escape and report violent/exploitative situations. Love146 approved a grant to fund the Stop Child Abuse project in the O’Chrov District of Banteay Meanchey Province. This five-month project focuses on the area located on the Thai Cambodian border where the majority of inhabitants lack economic opportunities and access to education. This poverty forces many children in O’Chrov district to participate in income generation along the Thai border, and are the most vulnerable to trafficking. Often, parents treat their children as commodities and abuse them physically and sexually. This project will significantly reduce violence and trafficking incidents through education and awareness.

Love 146 Recognition

In 2007, Love146 gained quick recognition for our programs, to earn the MySpace Impact Award for Social Justice and was named an “Agent of Change” by GQ magazine.

We're conflicted over our rapid growth - while we're excited to see our work expand, we lose sleep knowing our programs must continue to growing to meet the need. Over the last three years we’ve worked hard to take potential solutions for the world’s most vulnerable and make them a reality. We've taken time to think strategically about effective action, we’ve invested wisely in infrastructure and staff to provide stability and we’ve ensured we remain flexible to provide the best solutions. Our work requires more than finances; it requires a sustainable movement of abolition. Yet finances are a vital element and we're deeply grateful to those who support this vision of abolition. May we work ourselves out of a job.
